An artist’s life manifesto: Marina Abramović

8) List of the works
Extensive exhibition reflects on Marina Abramović’s close relationship with Italy. First major exhibition at Palazzo Strozzi devoted to a female artist

From 21 September 2018 to 20 January 2019, Palazzo Strozzi will host Italy’s first retrospective devoted to the work of Marina Abramović, one of contemporary arts most celebrated and controversial figures. Abramović revolutionised the idea of performance art, testing the limits of her body and its potential for creative expression. Italy was chosen by the artist as an important stop for this major retrospective exhibition, as the country has played a significant role in Abramović’s life and in the development of her art. Abramović’s work flourished in the time she spent in Italy in the 1970s – when she enjoyed international success with performances in Rome, Milan, Naples, Venice and Bologna.

The Cleaner also marks the first exhibition at Palazzo Strozzi devoted to a female artist. Marina Abramović will exhibit throughout the entire venue, interacting with this unique Florentine site across the piano nobile, its famed courtyard and the underground ‘Strozzina’, her work acting as a reminder of the value the Renaissance period placed in the individual.

“In the past 50 years Marina Abramovic has made an indelible mark on our collective imagination”, said Arturo Galansino, Director General of the Strozzi. “She’s constantly challenged the space between the artist and the audience, and her relationship with Italy since the 1970s have informed her performance like no other country. "The Palazzo Strozzi exhibitions are created specifically for the unique Renaissance context of Florence - and contemporary art plays an essential role within this. I been conscious for some time that the Strozzi had yet to dedicate its entire space to a leading, female artist and this deep-routed connection that Marina Abramovic feels to Italy made her the the obvious choice."

As the artist tells us, the exhibition title, The Cleaner, refers to a specific creative and existential moment, a reflection by the artist on her own life: "Like in a house, you only keep what you need and you clean away your past, your memory, your destiny".

This mesmerising retrospective brings together 100 works by the artist, offering visitors an overview of the most celebrated pieces in her career stretching from the 1960s to the 2000s - with videos, photographs, paintings, objects, installations and re-enactments of her celebrated live performances by a group of artists specially selected and trained for the show.

The exhibition, in which for the first time the artist's voice will accompany the visitors through the innovative audio guide, includes works which were performed in Italy during a period of considerable success for the artist, including her seminal Rhythm (1973-5) works and Imponderabilia (1977),-where the audience was forced to pass between the naked bodies of Abramović and her then partner, German artist Ulay, who were standing either side of a doorway. Abramović and Ulay lived in a Citroën van, traveling ceaselessly around Europe for three years - the van will be displayed in the courtyard of Palazzo Strozzi.
The tragedy of the war in Bosnia in the 1990s provided the inspiration for Balkan Baroque (1997), which earned Abramović the Leone d'Oro at the Venice Biennale in 1997 and which became a metaphor against all wars. In the performance the artist washes 1,500 ox bones, one by one, in a dark cellar, scraping pieces of flesh and cartilage off the bones while singing traditional Serbian songs.

More recent works, such as The Artist Present (2010), will also be showcased in the exhibition - in which, mute and motionless, for three months and over 700 hours at the MoMA in New York, Abramović stared at 1,675 people who sat opposite her, highlighting the spiritual communication between the artist and the audience which has become a fundamental element of her work.

Thanks to Palazzo Strozzi's renewed cooperation with the Opera di Santa Maria del Fiore, two works will exceptionally be on display in the Museo dell'Opera del Duomo in dialogue with such masterpieces as Michelangelo's Bandini Pietà. The works are a photograph of the Pietà (Anima Mundi) (1983/2002) and the video entitled The Kitchen V, Carrying the Milk (2009). In the former, Marina Abramović revisits the sacred iconography of the Pietà, while in the latter she pays tribute to the mystic Saint Therese of Avila. In conjunction with the Opera di Santa Maria del Fiore we will also be marketing a special joint ticket (€16.00 full price; €6.00 concession for schools) admitting the holder to the Palazzo Strozzi exhibition, the Baptistry of San Giovanni and the Museo dell'Opera del Duomo.

On Saturday 22 September, at 15.30 the artist will be speaking at a special event, tickets for which are sold out, entitled Marina Abramović Speaks organised by the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi at the Teatro del Maggio Musicale Fiorentino. Talking to Arturo Galansino, the artist will address some of the themes in her existential and creative development, reviewing the stages in her career from the early days in Serbia and her early success in Italy to her most recent and important performances all over the world.

The exhibition is organised by the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi and produced by Moderna Museet, Stockholm in conjunction with the Louisiana Museum of Modern Art, Humlebæk and the Bundeskunsthalle, Bonn. Curated by Arturo Galansino, Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi, and Lena Essling, Moderna Museet, with Tine Colstrup, Louisiana Museum of Modern Art, and Susanne Kleine, Bundeskunsthalle. With the support of the Comune di Firenze, the Camera di Commercio di Firenze, the Regione Toscana and the Associazione Partners Palazzo Strozzi. With the contribution of the Fondazione CR Firenze. 5 REASONS FOR SEEING MARINA ABRAMOVIĆ, THE CLEANER

1) Because it is the first exhibition that Palazzo Strozzi has ever devoted to a woman artist, the most important player in the field of performance art. Absolutely unprecedented for Italy in this immersive formula, Marina Abramović. The Cleaner offers spectators a chance to explore every aspect of the art of Marina Abramović, who with her works and her story – a career 50 years long – will be invading every available space in the Palazzo, from the courtyard and the Strozzina undercroft to the Piano Nobile.

2) Because the exhibition is a special story relating Marina Abramović's rapport with Italy that has been the venue for some of her most memorable performances*, and those performances will be revisited in the exhibition, highlighting the artist's extremely close bond with the country.

3) Because Marina Abramović is the artist who has marked our contemporary era more deeply than any other. And even though she was part of the last century, she has successfully ferried her art into the Third Millennium.

4) Because she is an artist who, in reflecting on her own life, has always shone the spotlight on crucial themes that concern us all, succeeding in communicating with the present more than any other artist, interpreting its contradictions and its inconsistencies, its urgencies and its emergencies. She has proven capable of "spring cleaning", keeping only what is needed and what is crucial.

5) Because visitors will be able to take part in the first person in the re-performances that will be held in Palazzo Strozzi on a daily basis, plunging first-hand into experiences that will make this exhibition a fully-fledged and unforgettable living experiment.

* Performance: art form created in the 1970s as an offshoot of Body Art, Performance Art consists of non-random, planned, occasionally dangerous actions that are designed to involve the audience.
The title of the exhibition, The Cleaner, refers to a reflection by Marina on her own life; according to it, like in a house, you only keep what you need and you clean away your past, your memory, your destiny. What remains after this existential clean-out can be found in a major retrospective that, with more than a hundred works on show, embraces over half a century of activity on the part of one of the most iconic figures in contemporary art, a woman who is considered the matriarch of performance art.

It is the first retrospective on a large scale to be devoted to Marina Abramović in Italy and it is also the first time that a female artist is the sole protagonist of an exhibition at Palazzo Strozzi. A stunning exhibition literally filled to the brim with an exploration of a human and professional journey that is the fruit of the never-ending research through which Marina continues untriringly to develop her means of expression. The exhibition occupies, in fact, all the exhibition spaces of the Renaissance palace Piano Nobile, Strozzina, courtyard and is divided into three parts in an intense and chronologically arranged presentation of her work from the sixties to the present day: a long, gripping and at times grueling artistic and existential journey.

The first leg of this journey starts in the cellars of the Strozzina, where her performances from the seventies, the more extreme, are on display, following an introduction consisting of works that will be unfamiliar to most people, a selection of her early paintings and graphic art. We can find in these almost abstract images of immaterial clouds or of accidents and collisions between trucks the premonitory signs of the road that Marina was shortly going to take.

Visitors are greeted by a vintage washing machine, The Cleaner to be precise, protagonist of one of the ironic stories that Marina likes to tell of her youth. At the entrance to the Piano Nobile, Imponderabilia introduces us to the symbiosis of art and life between Marina and Ulay, a watershed in the artist’s personal and professional story, with their performances as a couple, the three years lived on the road in a former police Citroën van, now exhibited in Palazzo Strozzi’s courtyard.

A photo taken by Ulay, somewhere in Tuscany, in 1977, in which Marina is smelling a bunch of freshly picked flowers, captures well the «melded personality» created by the two artists at the beginning of their relationship, one in which life and art were part of a joint project, a moto perpetuo expressed in the manifesto Art Vital. Then come their journeys to the farthestflung corners of the globe Australia, Thailand, Tibet, India where they joined up with Aborigines or Buddhist monks in search of the kind of new spirituality that people were yearning for in the Europe of the eighties, traversing, on an empty stomach, always one in front of the other, the vast expanse of Nightsea Crossing. The couple’s periplos comes to a close in China, with the meeting/farewell of The Lovers on the Great Wall, after three months of walking in pursuit of the subterranean energy currents of the Earth, its minerals and the dragons that pass through it.

The third and last leg, on which Marina is alone once again, starts in the nineties, from the dark theater of sorrow of Balkan Baroque denunciation of a massacre to be cleaned up by confronting one’s own past and fratricidal present—and ends amidst the bright lights of New York, with endless performances in direct contact with the eyes and emotions of the public, while the consecration/sublimation as a pop icon of an artist born in the former Yugoslavia takes place, with an accompanying swarm of actresses, fashion designers, singers, parodies, talk shows, triumphs on social media.

In all this movement, of bodies, objects and energies, on this Grand Tour that is Marina, we can also trace a poignant journey through Italy, a country with which Marina has established a special relationship. Rome, Milan, Naples, Bologna, Venice and Florence, but also Ferrara, Genazzano, Volterra, Como, Sicily, Stromboli, Ciociaria... all of these important passages for her career and her life. Very important in her career also the Buddhist center in Pomaia, in the surroundings of Pisa, where in October 1982 she met the Dalai Lama for the second time, Marina Ambramović, photograph taken by Ulay in Tuscany, 1977 interviewing him for the film Avalokiteshvara, which she directed.
One cannot, in fact, help being struck by the continuity and significance of the works she created in Italy, often true milestones of the genre. A series of successes that commenced in Rome, in 1973, when she was invited to take part in the exhibition Contemporanea, one of the first to include performance art. The work created on that occasion, Rhythm 10, was:

absolutely crazy. It was based on a drinking game played by Russian and Yugoslav peasants: you spread your fingers out on a wooden bar or table and stab down a sharp knife, fast, in the spaces between your fingers. Every time you miss and cut yourself, you have to take another drink. The drunker you get, the more likely you are to stab yourself. Like Russian roulette, it is a game of bravery and foolishness and despair and darkness — the perfect Slavic game.

The following year, 1974, at the Galleria Diagramma in Milan, Marina presented another shocking work, Rhythm 4:

I was naked, alone in a white room and crouched above a powerful industrial fan. As a video camera sent my image to the audience in the next room, I pressed my face against the hurricane blowing out of the fan, trying to take as much air into my lungs as possible. In a couple of minutes, the great torrent filling my insides caused me to lose consciousness. [The] point of the piece had been to show me in two different states: consciousness and unconsciousness. I knew that I was experiencing new ways of using my body as material.

A year went by and, in 1975, Marina was back in Italy, at the Studio Morra in Naples, with her most extreme performance, Rhythm 0, in which the artist turned herself into an object, leaving herself at the mercy of the audience. The people present were supplied with seventytwo objects including a hammer, a saw, a feather, a fork, an axe, a rose, a pair of scissors, needles, a pen, honey, a knife, a mirror, pins, lipstick, a Polaroid camera, a pistol and a bullet that could be used, for six hours, to do anything they wished to the artist’s body. The atmosphere became heated, the tension grew, her clothes were cut off, she was wounded, almost raped, someone pointed the loaded pistol at her neck and put her finger on the trigger... until she was saved by the same audience that was literally about to kill her.

In that moment I realized that the public can kill you. [...] What had happened while they were there, quite simply, was performance. And the essence of performance is that the audience and the performer make the piece together.

In 1976 she was at the Venice Biennale for the first time, where she presented Relation in Space, her first performance with Ulay. The two ran toward each other, at first brushing past, then touching and, after increasing their speed, colliding with ever greater force and producing rhythmic sounds with the clash of their naked flesh. The images show their taut bodies, in motion, like Hellenic athletes frozen in the course of a race.

In June 1977 their black van arrived in Bologna for International Performance Week, where the bodies of Marina and Ulay, naked and standing one in front of the other, reduced the width of the entrance to the Galleria Comunale d’Arte Moderna, forcing visitors to turn sideways in order to pass through, and to choose whether to face him or her: Imponderabilia! The performance was supposed to last six hours, but after a short time the police arrived, halting it on the grounds of indecent behavior.

In developing the work, we thought about a simple fact: if there were no artists, there would be no museums. From this idea we decided to make a poetic gesture—the artists would literally become the door to the museum [...] like doorposts or classical caryatids.

Again in Bologna, at Studio G7 the following October, the couple presented Relation in Time, where they remained seated with their backs to each other joined by their intertwined long hair for sixteen hours by themselves, and then for an hour in front of an audience.

The dimension of time was starting to take on a particular significance in their performances, which grew steadily longer, involving the public.

A few years later, at Genazzano in Lazio in 1983, they created Modus Vivendi, in which four tableaux vivants were staged, from dawn to sunset. After the physical performances of the previous decade, with their intense and violent actions and exchanges of gestural energy, Marina and Ulay had now chosen to concentrate on the creation of classical images, inspired by Western iconography and art. One of them, Anima Mundi, inspired by Michelangelo’s Pietà, is on display at the exhibition in Palazzo Strozzi, in dialog with the Bandini Pietà from the Museo dell’Opera del Duomo.

In 1985, Marina spent the months of September and October in Florence, together with Ulay, as guest artist at Villa Romana. During their period of residence the two artists rehearsed a dramatic piece, Fragilissimo, that was to have been staged at the Teatro Niccolini: the performance in Florence did not take place, but the work was later presented in Amsterdam and Stockholm. The project announced “a dramaturgical production centered on the figure of a woman on which three points of view converge”: those of Mister Mondo (Edmondo Zanolini, the woman is his mother), Michael Laub (she’s his sister) and Ulay (she’s his lover). This experiment already contained, in embryo, her own story, the autobiographical theater of Delusional (1994) and The Life and Death of Marina Abramović (2012). The music of Selinger, Van der Velde and Larry Steinbachek and the «ideas of light» of the Tuscan artist Marco Bagnoli made Fragilissimo a true theatrical production, a «portrait composed of images, fragments of conversation and music», «with the aim of constructing, distorting and unifying her persona and through it our own».

During their stay in Florence Marina and Ulay also took part in FIRE-NZE, a composite “allegorical drawing” based on the word “fire” that was organized by Mario Mariotti in Piazza Santo Spirito on September 21. A «scorching hot night» that had many Italian and foreign artists painting lengths of cloth to be hung from windows to evoke the appearance of Florentine squares when festivals were held during the Renaissance. Marina and Ulay contributed one that is now in the Centro Pecci, Prato.

In Italy, in 1997, international recognition came with the award of a Golden Lion at the Venice Biennale. The story is well-known: Marina was asked to officially represent Serbia and Montenegro at the Biennale, but the project was abruptly canceled because of the sensitive subject chosen by the artist. At the invitation of Germano Celant, she staged the sacrificial ritual of Balkan Baroque in the space below a staircase of the Central Pavilion of the Giardini, shocking public and critics alike:

I sat on the floor [...], on an enormous pile of cow bones: five hundred clean bones underneath; two thousand bloody, meaty, gristly bones on top. For four days, seven hours a day, I sat scrubbing the bloody bones while still, silent images from my interviews with my mother and father Danicia folding her hands over her heart then putting her hands over her eyes, Vojin waving his pistol flashed on two screens behind me. In the unairconditioned basement, in the humid summer air of Venice, the bloody, meaty, gristly bones rotted and filled with maggots as I scrubbed them: the stench was unholy, like the stench of bodies on the battlefield. The public filed in and stared, repulsed by the odor but transfixed by the spectacle. As I scrubbed the bones, I wept and sang Yugoslav folk songs from my childhood. And on the third screen was a video of me in glasses, a lab coat, and heavy leather shoes, very scientific-looking in a Slavic way, telling the story of the Wolf Rat [...]. For me, it was the essence of Balkan Baroqueness.

At the start of the new millennium Marina was back in Tuscany, for “Arte all’arte” 2001, with Mambo at Marienbad, staged in the Charcot pavilion of the former Ospedale Neuropsychiatrico in Volterra. The work made use of and reworked the setting and its history: the audience took off their shoes, put on “mambo” dance shoes instead and walked along a corridor, slowed down by magnets attached to the soles. At the sides of the corridor were rooms where a number of performers were lying on beds and wearing conical “energy” hats, while other empty beds evoked tragic events. At the end of the corridor, in a dimly lit room, Marina in a red dress danced the Mambo italiano, conjuring up Silvana Mangano and the 1954 film Mambo. The reference in the title to Alain Resnais’s Last Year at Marienbad (1961) indicated the interweaving of past and present, with the distressing history of the place and its burden of suffering contrasted with the exuberance of the dance.

Another reference to the cinema can be found in Stromboli, a work inspired by Rossellini’s masterpiece Stromboli, terra di Dio (1950). The title covers photographic works and a performance on which Marina worked in the summer of 2002.
Stromboli is the last permanently active volcano in Europe. Every 20 minutes, it’s shooting out lava. Every 20 minutes. Black sand. Black beach. Everything black. It’s fantastic. It’s a place of intense power and energy.

Performance Art is the epitome of the ephemeral and since the first decade of the century Marina has turned to re-performance as a method of keeping alive works that would otherwise exist only as documentation in the archives. Exemplary of this act of “conservation” of performance art were the Seven Easy Pieces (2005), reperformed at the Guggenheim Museum of New York in homage to the pioneers of the genre (Valie Export, Vito Acconci, Bruce Nauman, Gina Pane, Joseph Beuys and herself).

Through the Marina Abramović Institute for the Preservation of Performance Art (MAI, founded in 2010) and using the so called “Abramović Method,” developed over the course of her career as a physical and mental practice for staging a performance, the artist has prepared the ground for a transcendence of the temporal limits of her works and a reinvention of the very idea of performance in the 21st century: involving different viewers and performers, the work itself changes, and is renewed by the different contexts.

Thus some of Marina’s celebrated performances, inserted for the first time in a Renaissance setting, are brought back to life in the rooms of Palazzo Strozzi, in an ambience to be found nowhere else in the world and rich in historical impressions and inspirations. The Cleaner at Palazzo Strozzi changes its appearance every day and at every hour, thanks to a busy schedule of re-performances that cover the whole timespan of a retrospective which is at the same time a living organism that feeds on the body and the breath of the performers.

With this journey through the universe of Marina Abramović, Palazzo Strozzi reaffirms its identity as a versatile and multidisciplinary cultural space, a platform for the culture of the present that reflects Florence’s new position on the international map of contemporary art.
SCHEDULE OF RE-PERFORMANCES AND PARTICIPATORY WORKS

One of the "Marina Abramović. The Cleaner" exhibition's more unique features is the re-performances that will alternate inside the exhibition on a daily basis, turning Palazzo Strozzi into a changeable and constantly changing space.

Marina Abramović has been working with increasing intensity on re-performances as a way of preserving her performances and those of other artists for posterity since 2005. Seven Easy Pieces, presented at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York in that year, consists of seven re-performances of performances by the artists Valie Export, Vito Acconci, Bruce Nauman, Gina Pane and Josef Beuys, and by Abramović herself.

Marina considers re-performance to be a way of breathing new life into a performance, an ephemeral art by definition. Performed by new artists, the works are no longer simply archive documentation, they take on a new life and change with each performer, exactly as happens with the performance of a musical piece which can change radically from one performer to the next. A work must have its own life and survive its creator.

The live revisitation of her celebrated performances, the schedule is entrusted to a group of performers specially selected and trained for the Palazzo Strozzi exhibition by Marina Abramović's close assistant Lynsey Peisinger.

The re-performance will take place every day from 10.30 to 19.30, Thursday until 21.30

This performance was produced for the first time in 1977 at the Galleria Comunale d'Arte Moderna in Bologna, where Marina Abramović and Ulay stood facing one another in a narrow passageway for ninety minutes, motionless and naked, forcing visitors wishing to enter the museum to pass between them. The performance was supposed to last six hours but the police put a stop to it.

In the re-performance, two performers stand naked in a narrow passageway at the entrance to the Piano Nobile and visitors can choose whether to pass between their two bodies or to the side.

FREEING SERIES

Freeing the Body

The re-performances will take place Thursday and Saturday from 14:00

These three re-performances, alternating on a weekly basis, evoke the famous Freeing series which marked a rite of passage for Marina, "exorcising" her original environment before leaving Belgrade in 1975.

In Freeing the Voice the performer, lying on a mattress on the ground with his or her head arching backwards, shouts until he or she loses his or her voice.

In Freeing the Memory the performer is seated on a chair and repeats words and phrases in his or her own language without a break. The performance ends when the performer cannot think of any more words.

Freeing the Body will be performed with the accompaniment of a live musician. Music and the rhythm of African drums move the body of the performer who, his or her swathed in a black bandana, dances and moves until he or she drops to the ground in exhaustion.
LUMINOSITY

The re-performance will take place daily from 15:00-16:00

This work, which is part of the Spirit House performance that Marina produced at the Sean Kelly Gallery in New York in 1997, prompts a reflection on the intensity of spirituality that succeeds in overriding the body's physicality through control of movement, rhythm and gesture. The performer, naked, balances for thirty minutes on a bicycle saddle, her feet suspended above the ground, slowly moving her arms and legs. The intensity of the light gradually causes the volume of the space to grow.

The re-performance will take place daily from 14.30 to 19.30; Thursday 10.30-15.30; 16.30-21.30

The re-performance is an exact replica of Marina's original performed in 1995 when, seated with a human skeleton in her lap, she gently and carefully attempted to clean it with a brush, but the artist herself became increasingly dirty because she was rinsing the brush in water mixed with clay.

A six-hour performance echoing, among other things, Tibetan death rituals that prepare disciples to become one with their own mortality.

The re-performance (duration: 12 days) will take place from Tuesday 4 December at 18.30 to Sunday 16 December at 18.30

In the re-performance, as Marina Abramović had done in 2002 at the Sean Kelly Gallery in New York, the performer remains in isolation, silence and fasting for twelve days under the eyes of the public. In three small raised rooms, joined on the ground by stairs whose pegs are replaced by knives with blades facing upwards, dressed with clothes inspired by the constructivist Aleksandr Rodchenko (1891-1956), the performer establishes a very intense exchange of energy with the visitors, essential for the performance success.

PARTICIPATORY WORKS
Participatory works entail the direct involvement of the public and will be held inside the exhibition areas daily during exhibition opening hours. A schedule and instructions for visitors are given below.

Description:
Wearing Shoes for departure allows the visitor to experience immobilising the body in order to move the mind. The artist's instructions act as a hypnotic suggestion which, together with contact with the mineral, lulls the visitor into a dimension of trance and contemplation.

<tr>
<td>After completing the Great Wall Walk with Ulay, Marina began to take an interest in working with crystals and minerals – many of which came precisely from the areas of China that she had crossed on foot – inserting them into everyday items such as chairs and beds. The new objects took on the name of Transitory Objects. In using the word &quot;transitory&quot; Marina was trying to communicate two meanings: on the one hand, the energy emanated which allows the user to transit towards a renewed and meditative state of consciousness; and on the other, they are transitory in the sense that they are temporary, they can be set aside once the desired state of consciousness has been achieved. The objects are made up of different materials such as quartz, amethyst, tourmaline, copper, iron and wood, each one of which produces a different energy impact. The objects also find their sole and ultimate significance only in their interaction with the human being. Only thus can the energy circulate and the object become truly &quot;transitory.&quot; This is also why they are not called sculptures, a term that would imply that the spectator uses only his or her sight to appreciate them.</td>

Description:
Private Archaeology is the artist’s reflection on the sources of inspiration for her work. Marina has brought together objects, artefacts, quotes from books, photographs of performances by other artists and portraits of people and places. All of this is presented in 59 collages annotated according to the various themes addressed: places of power, food, preparing to pass over to the other side, death and the final passage.
ACTIVITIES IN THE EXHIBITION AND BEYOND

AUDIO-GUIDE

For the very first time it is the voice of the artist in person that will be guiding visitors thanks to an innovative audio-guide (by START) in which Marina Abramović describes and reminisces about her performances and various moments in her charismatic life. The tour is introduced by Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi's Director General Arturo Galansino, while the artist welcomes visitors with her greeting in Italian.

PUBLICATIONS

The catalogue in Italian and English, edited by Arturo Galansino and published by Marsilio, comprises material on the artist, all the exhibits on display in the exhibition and numerous essays, including one by Galansino himself on Marina Abramović and Italy (Grand Tour Marina). Marsilio is also publishing a guide to the exhibition, it too in both languages, comprising autobiographical texts by the artist and numerous images of the layout in Palazzo Strozzi. This means, of course, that it cannot be published until a few days after the exhibition has opened.

Marina Abramović Interviews 1976–2018 is being published to tie in with Palazzo Strozzi's Marina Abramović. The Cleaner exhibition. The third volume in English in a series devoted to the artist after Drawings and Writings, Interviews contains a collection of the most important interviews granted by Marina Abramovic either to the press or published in books and catalogues over the past forty-two years. The thirty-four interviews addressing the main themes associated with her long career are supplemented by a very recent interview with the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi's Director General Arturo Galansino, devoted primarily to the exhibition in Florence of which he is the curator, and to Marina Abramovic's relationship with Italy, the old masters and the theatre.

MARINA IN TUSCANY

A video in a room on the Piano Nobile reviews the relationship that Marina Abramović has had and continues to have with Tuscany, revisiting a number of particularly significant moments. Her first encounter dates back to 1977 when, together with Ulay, she travelled in the region in the Citroën van on display in the courtyard of Palazzo Strozzi. In 1982 at the Buddhist centre in Pomaia (Istituto Lama Tzong Khapa), she met and interviewed the 14th Dalai Lama for her film Avalokiteshvara (Dalai Lama Film, 1983). In 1985 she spent the months of September and October in Florence with Ulay as guest artists at Villa Romana. While in residence the two artists rehearsed their performance entitled Frailissimo and took part in FIRE-NZE, an "allegorical drawing" built around the word "Fire", devised by Mario Mariotti in Piazza Santo Spirito on 21 September 1985. This "hot and fiery night" involved Italian and foreign artists alike with "washing hanging out of the windows overlooking the piazza": their number included Marina and Ulay who entered a piece a cloth. On 16 September 2001, during "Arte all'Arte", she presented Mambo a Marienbad in the Charcot Pavilion in the former neuro-psychiatric hospital in Volterra. In March 2018 Marina Abramović spent several days in Florence preparing the exhibition.

FUORIMOSTRA

In an effort to shine the spotlight on the key network of synergies forged with regional museums and institutions, Palazzo Strozzi has put together the Marina Abramović FUORIMOSTRA, an extensive guide to sites in Florence and Tuscany designed to acquaint visitors with the region's destinations and heritage, published in both hardcopy and digital format.

EXHIBITION AT THE DIDA – DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE
Università degli Studi di Firenze / Florence University

While preparing the exhibition in Palazzo Strozzi, Marina Abramović expressed a wish to work on an accurate model of the Piano Nobile and Strozzina spaces in which to place scale models of her works and to plan the tour of the show in every detail. Her request spawned a joint venture between the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi and the DIDA, Florence University's Department of Architecture. The DIDA's model lab offered technical advice and set up a workshop with a group of students to produce a model of Palazzo Strozzi. The result of their efforts will be showcased in the DIDA's own exhibition hall (in the Galleria di Santa Verdiana at Via della Mattonaia 8, from 8 October to 9 November) alongside a selection of pictures of Marina Abramović planning the Palazzo Strozzi exhibition layout.

FOR CLASSES
Exhibition tour. Tours are tailored to cater for different age groups. The tour, lasting an hour and a half, costs € 52.00 (for groups of max. 25 students) in addition to the cost of admission to the exhibition (€ 4.00 per student). For the Marina Abramović. The Cleaner exhibition, the tour without a workshop is designed only for lower and upper secondary school classes.

Tour + creative workshop (for kindergarten, primary school and lower and upper secondary school). A tour of the exhibition and the close observation of a selection of exhibits is followed by a workshop allowing each participant to develop his or her personal reaction to the stimuli taken on board during the tour. The activity, which is tailored to cater for different age groups, lasts two hours (an hour and a half for kindergarten) and costs € 72.00 (for groups of max. 25 students) in addition to the cost of admission to the exhibition (€ 4.00 per student; free for children aged under 6). For children in primary school years 4 and 5 there will also be an introductory talk in class to prepare them for the tour and workshop.

The strength of emotions (kindergarten students from age 4, primary school years 1, 2 and 3): in many of her works Marina Abramović proposes the use of such objects as crystals and hats, which she claims serve to gather the energies of nature that surround us and to relate them to our own interior energy. After discovering these mysterious objects on display in the exhibition, children take part in a workshop devoted to the strength of emotions and to portraying those emotions through the use of the body and of objects that we will be making together.

How to become a work of art (primary school, years 4 and 5): Marina Abramović is the world's most famous living performance artist and one of the first artists ever to have directly used her body in her work. The activity is divided into two phases: the first, in the classroom, is devoted to the relationship between performance art and other art forms such as sculpture and painting and lasts roughly 2 hours; the second is held inside Palazzo Strozzi, with students familiarising with some of the artist's works associated with her personal life story and performing a series of exercises using the body as a tool for expression.

Exhibitionism (lower secondary school): in the course of her artistic career Marina Abramović has turned her personal life story (her family, her loves) and the story of her country (dictatorship, wars) into evocative works in which the artist's body is the sole means of expression. Students observe a selection of works, discovering the process and preparation to which the artist subjects herself in order to produce her performances. At the end of the activity the class is accompanied in a series of workshop exercises devoted to the use and display of the body in a multi-faceted reflection that touches on such topical issues as the use of one's own image in the age of the Internet and digital communication.

Bodies in action (upper secondary school): interested classes will be able to supplement their conversational tour of the exhibition with a final stage in the workshop, where they can explore Marina Abramovic's use of her body in her work thanks to exercises devoted to the use of the gaze and the body as a means for relating to others.

SPECIAL SCHEME: Educare al presente. Contemporary art in schools 2018–19: environment and resources

Wikipedia Training.
To tie in with the Marina Abramović. The Cleaner exhibition, the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi offers a training course devoted to the use of Wikipedia with in-depth exploration of Performance Art. The training course is structured in such a way as to offer university students a theoretical and practical approach to the use of Wikipedia. In the course of the meetings we will be exploring a number of aspects in greater depth, ranging from bibliographical research through databases and digital archives to issues involved in the management of images by type of copyright and to the communication and dissemination of art through an online platform. The goal of the autumn 2018 project is the development of research into art historical content concerned with Performance Art, going on to return the results of that research to Wikipedia for their dissemination through the creation of dedicated entries. Scheme devised in conjunction with MAB Toscana, WIKIMEDIA Italia and the SAGAS Department of the Università degli Studi di Firenze. For further information: edu@palazzostrozzi.org

Performing for the Camera
This scheme, designed for students in Florence's Italian and international art academies, was spawned by the idea of using the Palazzo Strozzi exhibition as a terrain for researching the relationship between photography and performance in order to produce new works of art and a publication. The activity, which will be taking place over three months, will enable students to explore the close tie between performance art and photography by analysing the two disciplines' relations and their specific features. The theme will offer students an overview of photography used as tool for recording performances or practised as a performance act in itself, for interpretation and application in their own branch of artistic research. In a second phase, the works created by the students will provide the material for the production of a publication edited by the students themselves. The scheme is devised and produced in conjunction with the Accademia di Belle Arti di Firenze, LABA – Libera Accademia di Belle Arti, Syracuse University, SACI College of Art and Design and SRISA International School of Art. For further information: edu@palazzostrozzi.org

ACCESSIBILITY SCHEMES

With Many Voices. A scheme for Alzheimer sufferers and their caregivers
With Many Voices is the Fondazione Palazzo Strozzi's scheme for Alzheimer sufferers, their relatives and caregivers. The scheme is conducted in conjunction with expert geriatric educators, offering participants the opportunity to express themselves through art. Using the imagination rather than the memory and inventiveness rather than logical or cognitive faculties stimulates sufferers' residual ability for communication. Since 2016 several artists have been invited to develop a proposal, taking their inspiration from the works of art on display in the Palazzo Strozzi exhibition and focusing on the relationship between Alzheimer sufferers and their companions. After Virginia Zanetti and Cristina Pancini, for the Marina Abramović. The Cleaner exhibition the scheme will be conducted in conjunction with the artist Marina Arienzale and will be presented on 25 September at 15.00. For further information and reservations: edu@palazzostrozzi.org

Nuances. A scheme for young people suffering from autistic spectrum disorders
Nuances is Palazzo Strozzi's scheme for young people aged 15 to 20 suffering from autistic spectrum disorders. Every month a meeting is steered by museum educators and professional education specialists who accompany participants to discover some of the works of art on display in the exhibition. The activities and stimuli proposed in the exhibition rooms are devised in conjunction with users and educators from the Centro Casadasé (Associazione Autismo Firenze). For further information and reservations: edu@palazzostrozzi.org

Connections
Connections is Palazzo Strozzi's scheme designed to make exhibitions accessible also to groups of visitors with disabilities (physical, psychic or cognitive health issues). The programme consists of conversational tours tailored to cater for the group's specific characteristics, with the observation of a selection of works on display with participants' active involvement. The Education Department meets with the group's accompaniers before each visit to discuss the timing and method of the tour. Two encounters open to all health and social workers (educators, psychologists and therapists) are organised at the start and end of each exhibition to introduce the scheme, in relation to the specific exhibition, to share and assess experiences and to plan ahead for the next exhibition. Reservations are required to take part in the scheme and places are limited. The introductory meeting will be held on 4 October at 10.00. A CLOSER LOOK

The Curator's choice:
12 works of art telling the exhibition Marina Abramović. The Cleaner

1) Rhythm 5, 1974
   «I construct a five-pointed star. The construction is made in wood shavings soaked in 100 liters of petrol. I light the star. I walk around the star. I don’t realize the fire has consumed all of the oxygen when I lay down in the star. I lose consciousness. Because I am lying down the public does not react. When a flame touches my leg and I still don’t react, two people from the public enter the star and carry me out». The performance is interrupted.

9) Balkan Baroque, 1997

«The installation.
Images are projected onto the three walls of the space. My mother, my father, and myself. On the floor are two copper sinks and one copper bathtub filled with water.
Performance
In the middle of the space I wash 1,000 fresh beef bones, continuously singing folksongs from my childhood.
Excerpts from the folksongs that I sing in Balkan Baroque:
First Day
«When we stopped next to our Russian tree the snow had already covered everything . . . »
Second Day
«You sing beautifully, you sing beautifully, blackbird, blackbird . . . What else can I do, what else can I do when my feet are bare . . . »
Third Day
«Hey, Kato, hey my treasure, come with me to pick sage . . . I can’t, master, I can’t. There is no bright moon . . . »
Fourth Day
«All the birds from the forest, all the birds from the forest, come down to the sea. Only one stays, only one stays, to sing to me about unhappy love.” I sing these lines continuously over a period of six hours every day».
Performance
Duration: 4 days, 6 hours
47th Venice Biennale, June 1997

10) House with Ocean View, 2002

The House with the Ocean View was performed at the Sean Kelly Gallery in New York in 2002. Three suspended rooms were built facing the street. The only thing separating artist and audience were three ladders with rungs made of upturned butcher’s knives. I lived in this space for twelve days, without eating or speaking. The audience could see me sleeping, meditating, showering or using the bathroom. The performance was a declaration on transparency and the state of helplessness, and afforded an energy dialogue between performer and spectators.

The idea: This performance comes from my desire to see if it is possible to use simple daily discipline, rules, and restrictions to purify myself. Can I change my energy field? Can this energy field change the energy field of the audience and of the space?
Installation: artist
Duration of the performance: 12 days
Food: no food; Water: large quantity of mineral water; Talking: no talking; Singing: possible and unpredictable; Writing: no writing; Sleeping: 7 hours a day; Standing: unlimited; Sitting: unlimited; Lying: unlimited; Shower: 3 times a day
Installation: audience
Use telescope
Remain silent
Establish energy dialogue with the artist
Clothes: The clothes for The House with the Ocean View were inspired by Alexander Rodchenko. The colors of the clothes were selected in accordance with the principles of the Hindu Vedic square. The boots are the ones I wore for the walk on the Great Wall of China in 1988.
Supplies: 1 bottle of pure almond oil; 1 bottle of rose water; 1 bar of natural soap; 1 wooden comb; 12 fine cotton towels; 12 pairs of cotton panties; 12 cotton t-shirts; 7 cotton pants; 7 cotton shirts

Performance
Duration: 12 days

11) Seven Easy Pieces, 2005
«For seven consecutive nights at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum I reenacted seminal performance works by my peers dating from the nineteen-sixties and -seventies. The project was premised on the fact that little documentation exists for most performances from this critical early period; one often has to rely upon testimonies from witnesses or photographs that show only portions of any given piece. Seven Easy Pieces examines the possibility of redoing and preserving an art form that is, by nature, ephemeral»:

5. Joseph Beuys, How to Explain Pictures to a Dead Hare (1965)
6. Marina Abramović, Lips of Thomas (1975, Galerie Krinzinger, Innsbruck)
7. Marina Abramović, Entering the Other Side (2005)

12) The Artist is Present
«In 2010, in my retrospective exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art in New York (MoMA), I staged a performance in which I sat in a chair, completely still and in silence. Visitors were invited to sit in a chair opposite mine and stare at me for as long as they liked. I performed for 736 hours, making eye contact with 1,675 people during this time. This installation presents a replica of the furniture used at the MoMA performance. Two large screens opposite each other show the artist and visitors face to face. The work embodies my total vulnerability and openness before the public. I always seek very simple forms in my work regarding geometry, architecture, color, elements, and the performance itself. However, over and above simplicity, I always deal with effort, as my work demands a lot of preparation. That is especially true in The Artist is Present, one of the most difficult performances I have ever staged. Before that, the public was not present; therefore there is no way to compare. So by the end of The Artist is Present I was in a state of mental and physical exhaustion such as I had never felt before. What’s more, all my points of view, everything that had seemed important before, my daily life, the things I liked and disliked, everything was turned upside down».

Marina Abramović Biography

Marina Abramović is born to an affluent family in Belgrade, former Yugoslavia on 30 November. Her parents, Vojo and Danica Abramović, partisans during World War II, continue to militate in General Tito’s Communist Party. Marina spends her early years living with her maternal grandmother Milica Rosic, and is deeply influenced by the grandmother’s Orthodox faith.

1952
Her brother Velimir is born. Marina moves in with her parents, facing an emotionally trying life under her mother’s strict supervision.

1953–58
Marina is encouraged from an early age to express herself creatively through drawing and painting and at twelve is given her own studio at home.

1960–65
Marina develops her drawing and painting, often through classically figurative floral still lifes and portraits.

1965–70
Marina studies at the Academy of Fine Arts in Belgrade. Her earlier figurative expressions become increasingly abstract.

1970–73
While pursuing her studies at the Academy of Fine Arts in Zagreb, Abramović begins to use her body as a tool in her art. She starts experimenting with sound and performance.

1971
Abramović marries the conceptual artist Neša Paripović.

1973
Abramović meets the conceptual artist Joseph Beuys in Edinburgh and later at the Student Cultural Center of Belgrade, SKC. Beuys’s happenings make a strong impression on Marina. She collaborates with the boundary-breaking artist Hermann Nitsch. The same year, she performs Rhythm 10 at the Villa Borghese, Museo d’Arte Contemporanea in Rome.

1974
Abramović performs the work Rhythm 5 at SKC. The same year, Rhythm 4 is presented at Galleria Diagramma in Milan, as well as the last work in the series, Rhythm 0, at the gallery Studio Morra in Naples.

1975
Abramović travels to Amsterdam to take part in an international gathering for performance artists and meets the German artist Ulay (Frank Uwe Laysiepen, b. 1943).

1976
Twenty-nine-year-old Abramović divorces Paripović. Throughout her marriage she had lived with her mother; after the divorce, she flees her repressive family home and moves in with Ulay in Amsterdam.

1977–79
Abramović and Ulay create a number of works under the shared title Relation Works. They write the manifesto Art Vital, which sets the course for their artistic practice. They decide to be in a perpetual state of transition, and for the next three years they live and work in a van while travelling through Europe.
1980–81
The couple begin to play a central role in the artistic life of Amsterdam. They keep their van and travel to Australia and its Great Victoria Desert, where they live with the Pintupi tribe for nine months. Influenced by aboriginal culture, they create the performance piece Nightsea Crossing.

1982
Nightsea Crossing is performed at museums and exhibition halls in cities such as Kassel at Documenta 7, Cologne, Düsseldorf, Berlin, Amsterdam, Chicago, and Toronto. In order to practice the vipassana meditation technique, Abramović and Ulay travel to Bodhgaya, India, where they meet the Dalai Lama and his oldest mentor, the tulku Kyabje Ling Rinpoche.

1983
Abramović and Ulay invite the Tibetan lama Ngawang Soepa Lucyar and the Aboriginal medicine man Charlie Watuma Taruru Tjungurrayi, their travelling companion in the Great Victoria Desert, to perform a new version of Nightsea Crossing together.

1985
In Florence, Gast-Künstler at Villa Romana, she rehearses with Ulay a piece entitled Fragilissimo, which was scheduled to run at the Teatro Niccolini. In the event the Florentine performance never took place, but the work was presented in Amsterdam and Stockholm.

1986
The artisticouple take their first trip to China. Ever since the trip to the Australian desert in 1980, they had been working on an idea for a performance-walk along the Great Wall of China.

1988
After years of preparation, the walk along the Great Wall of China begins for The Lovers. Abramović walks from the Shanhai Pass at the wall’s east end and Ulay walks from the wall’s western end in the opposite direction. The work marks the definitive end of their romantic relationship, as well as of their twelve-year-long artistic collaboration.

1989
Abramović’s new solo works are a series of interactive objects, known as Transitory Objects. Among other places, the works are shown in Oxford’s Museum of Modern Art, the Städtische Kunsthalle in Düsseldorf, and Montreal’s Museum of Modern Art.

1990
Abramović moves to Paris, but keeps her apartment in Amsterdam. She is invited to take part in the remarkable exhibition Magiciens de la Terre at the Centre Pompidou in Paris. Soon after the group exhibition, The Lovers opens at the same museum.

1991
Abramović travels to Brasil a number of times to continue her work on Transitory Objects.

1992–93
Abramović’s autobiographical play Biography, directed by Charles Atlas, premieres in Madrid and is also shown at Documenta 9 in Kassel.

1995
A retrospective exhibition is held at Oxford’s Museum of Modern Art.
1996
To tie in with her fiftieth birthday celebrations, a vernissage for the retrospective Marina Abramović: Objects, Performance, Video, Sound is held at the Stedelijk Museum voor Aktuele Kunst in Ghent.

1997
Abramović is invited to represent Serbia and Montenegro at the Yugoslav pavilion at the Venice Biennale, but breaks the collaboration off due to a dispute concerning her subject. The performance piece Balkan Baroque is shown instead in a basement in the Central Pavilion at the Giardini, where it causes a stir. Abramović is awarded the Golden Lion prize for Best Artist of the Biennale.

1998
Ahead of forthcoming performative projects, she develops the workshop Cleaning the House, a series of exercises in concentration and presence of mind.

2000
Vojo Abramović dies of cancer.

2001
The interactive project Dream House opens in conjunction with the Echigo-Tsumari Art Triennial in Japan, where it is installed permanently. Mambo at Marienbad, a performance, is produced in the former neuropsychiatric hospital in Volterra.

2002
The House with the Ocean View is presented at the Sean Kelly Gallery. In front of visitors, Abramović spends twelve days strictly fasting and performing seemingly simple everyday tasks.

2004
The Art Institute of Chicago awards Abramović an honorary doctorate. She travels to Belgrade to develop the video project Balkan Erotic Epic and also takes part in the 2004 biennial at the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York.

2005
Seven Easy Pieces is presented at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York. The work consists of seven re-stagings of performances by Valie Export, Vito Acconci, Bruce Nauman, Gina Pane, Joseph Beuys, and Marina Abramović herself. The project is a result of Abramović’s work with re-performance – a way of holding in trust one’s own as well as other artists’ performance pieces.

2006
Marina buys an estate in Hudson, New York, that becomes her private residence and a meeting place for performance art.

2007
Danica Abramović dies in Belgrade.

2010
New York’s MoMA presents the extensive retrospective The Artist is Present with many re-performances of Abramović’s works. The artist herself performs the new and demanding piece The Artist is Present for the duration of the exhibition. The exhibition is the largest presentation of performance in the history of the museum. Abramović founds the Marina Abramović Institute (MAI) to work across the sciences to draft a theoretical and practical platform for performance art.
2011
The Artist is Present is shown at the Garage Center for Contemporary Culture in Moscow. The biographical play The Life and Death of Marina Abramović premières at the Manchester International Festival.

2012
The documentary Marina Abramović: The Artist is Present premières at the Sundance Film Festival. The exhibition Marina Abramović, Balkan Stories is shown at the Kunsthalle Wien.

2014
The exhibition 512 Hours is presented at London’s Serpentine Gallery. The project is a series of interactive exercises that have their starting points in the artist’s own work process, in which the audience participates.

2015
The two extensive, separate exhibitions Terra Comunal/Communal Land and Private Archaeology open at SESC Pompeia in São Paulo and the Museum of Old and New Art in Tasmania respectively.

2017–18
Marina Abramović. The Cleaner is shown at the Moderna Museet in Stockholm. The exhibition travels to the Louisiana Museum of Modern Art in Humlebæk, Denmark, and to the Bundeskunsthalle, Bonn, Germany.
